

InsideHook

8 Wine Brands Raising Money for Good Causes

These wineries are known for more than delicious vino

It always feels good to support a brand that advocates for a worthy cause. It got us thinking about some of our favorite wine brands and the good deeds that they do, whether it's working to raise awareness of environmental issues or working with organizations that strive to support women in the workforce. While there are countless wineries doing good things for the environment and community, these eight wine brands give back to some of our favorite causes.

Iron Horse Vineyards

Three generations live on the Iron Horse Vineyards property, so they truly care about their home, as well as the land of surrounding Sonoma County. They use all recycled water in the vineyards and are involved with a multi-year, multi-million dollar salmon habitat restoration project on their section of Green Valley Creek. In addition, a portion of proceeds from their Ocean Reserve Blanc de Blancs sparkling wine goes to an organization that works to protect the ocean. The recipient changes with every vintage, and Marine Mammal Center in Sausalito, California will benefit from the most recent 2019 vintage.